The Witch House in Salem, MA attracts thousands of visitors every year, but its history is a lot more dark and complicated than meets the eye. The house is the only remaining structure that you can visit in Salem that has direct ties to the Salem Witch Trials of 1692. It was the home of Judge Jonathan Corwin, a local magistrate and civic leader who investigated the claims of witchcraft in town. He served on the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which ultimately led to the execution of 19 people for their "crimes," despite all 19 maintaining their innocence.

The house, located at 310 Essex Street, was purchased by Corwin in 1675. He lived there for nearly 40 years and it remained in his family until the mid-1800s. Because of its lasting impact on history, many museums around Salem have put together specialized overviews of the house, including the Salem Witch Museum, the Salem City Guide, and The Witch House. You can also check out photos from inside the house from people who have previously visited.

Dear Readers,

October is my favorite month. The heat of summer is past, leaving the landscape in brilliant reds, oranges and yellows ~ filling us up with color to last all winter long.

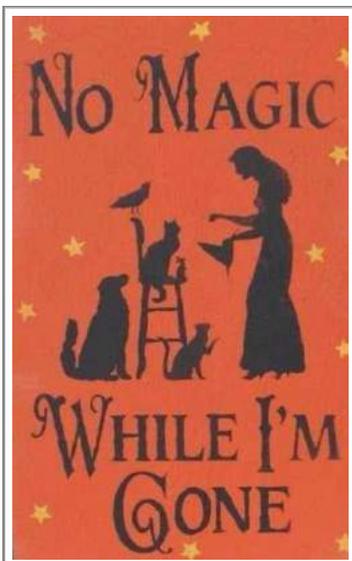

Balance is the key to life. As I write this, Ian hit Florida overnight and reports are coming in of the horrifying devastation. I know the fear. I lived in Naples, Florida and got out ahead of Hurricane David in 1979. I wonder what can be done to bring these extreme weather events into balance? Every year hurricanes flood the South and wildfires burn in the West. Knowing how thoughts create, let's unite in visualizing rain falling in complete balance and perfect harmony throughout the country.

October brings the full cycle of harvest, hearty soups and crispy caramel apples ~ and to some of us, Green Bay Packers football. October also brings a salute, if you will, to Halloween (aka. All Hallows Eve) followed by All Saint's Day on Nov. 1 when the veil between the worlds is said to be thinner, and communication with the other side is clearer.

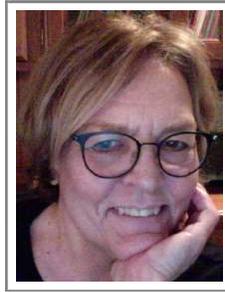

My work of Mediumship and bringing through messages from the dead offers comfort and completion to those on this side. This issue offers glimpses into the Afterlife, and it is my hope that you will read it all, through to the end, for you will gain much spiritual richness.

Let me know your thoughts. I am here if you wish to connect with me, or with someone on The Other Side.

Angel Talk™

By Nancy Freier

On occasion, ghosts appear to me for help. Orchestrated by the angels, they come either because they are confused and don't know where they are ~ usually in the case of sudden deaths, or to warn of impending danger. In this case, both seem to be true.

Unlike the Hollywood movies of scary, bloodied ghosts who haunt and chill us to the bone, seeing a ghost of a person is not scary, but a surprise! They come for help and direction, as they have not yet crossed over to The Other Side. They are "earthbound" meaning they are still focused on their life here on this side. Sometimes they don't realize they are dead!

Here is one such ghost sighting incident that happened in the year 2000. My then partner Jim and I were in our motor home on a cross-country book tour teaching my angel communication classes. We were parked at a campground set deep in the woods in upstate New York. Quite frankly, the place gave me the creeps from the moment we drove up to the gate, and I wanted to back up and get out of there! The owner, with his cold, beady eyes just stared at us. I wanted to leave but he prohibited us from backing up the driveway. We were forced to stay both nights that we had previously reserved. It still gives me a chill when I think about this.

On the second and final evening there, we had just finished dinner. If you're familiar with the layout of a mobile home, the table is between two benches that face one another and is situated across a narrow aisle from the kitchen sink. Jim had finished eating and walked to the front of the mobile home. All of a sudden the ghost of a man was sitting across from me where Jim had been! He was real in every detail except that I could see right through him. He had salt and pepper hair and a trim beard. He was wearing a red plaid hunting shirt with blue jean bib overalls. A white T-shirt peeked through at the neck. He had a tired and concerned look on his face. In an instant I knew that he had been shot in a hunting incident. His image was there for only a split second and then it was gone.

It took another moment for me to figure out what I had just witnessed. Such as it is with surprise visitors from spirit. I am never expecting them, and it happens so quickly that if I am unaware of this phenomenon, I could easily brush the vision off as fantasy. But this ghost was on a mission. He wanted me to know that his death was no accident! My intuition was right on. That beady-eyed owner of the campground had shot and killed him!

After helping him cross over to the Light, and I felt he was on his way, Jim and I looked at each other, packed up and drove the RV out of there that night.

It is my experience that ghosts, or "earthbound spirits" are unaware of what happened to them. Sometimes they don't realize that they are dead! This is fairly common in the case of sudden deaths. They don't know where they are and they come seeking guidance and direction. In this case, this man's ghost came to not only tell me the truth ~ that he was murdered, but also needed to warn us to get out of there!

As a Medium I've often said I must have a signboard hanging up somewhere in the spirit world that reads: "Stop here if you need help" ~ or so it seems!

The British Royals and Spiritualism

Reprinted from The Friday Afterlife Report - September 16, 2022

<https://www.victorzammit.com/September16th2022/>

With so much of the world's attention being focused on the royal family last month, it is interesting to note the family's "secret" connection with Spiritualism. When the late queen's father, King George VI was alive, he reportedly told his speech therapist, Lionel Logue, "My family are no strangers to Spiritualism." He may have been talking about Queen Victoria's reliance on Scottish medium John Brown (see next item). Gordon Adams, a son-in-law of British medium Lilian Bailey, confided to Roy Stemman (assistant editor to Maurice Barbanell for eight years) that his mother-in-law had been involved in a remarkable séance in 1953. He was sworn to secrecy and it was not until Lilian Bailey's death in October 1971 that he and others who knew the story were free to discuss it.

Apparently, Lilian received a request from a stranger to give a séance at a house in Kensington and she agreed. A limousine took her to a well-appointed property; then she was taken on to another address. She was required to put on a blindfold during the journey so that there were no visual clues about the person or people she would be meeting. She was eventually led into a room, where she sensed others were gathered and was asked to conduct the séance still wearing the blindfold. When she returned to normal consciousness she was told that she could remove the blindfold. Sitting in a circle on gilt chairs were the Queen Mother, the Queen, Prince Philip, Princess Margaret, Princess Alexandra, and the Duke of Kent.

This astonishing experience, which happened a year after the death of King George VI, had been arranged in the hope of receiving a communication from the dead monarch, and it was almost certainly successful. Unsurprisingly, none of those who participated has ever commented directly on the secret séance. Royal biographer and Daily Telegraph court correspondent Ann Morrow included this story in her book, The Queen Mother. The Queen Mother is reported to have continued to phone Lilian Bailey for some time after the séance and further private sittings took place.

Queen Victoria (1819-1901) Communicates Through Leslie Flint

When Queen Victoria's beloved husband, Albert, died at the age of 42, the young queen was plunged into grief and withdrew from public life for three years. The only thing that seemed to help her was her close friendship with one of her servants, a Scot named John Brown. Their relationship was, and still is, the subject of gossip and it was rumored that the two were secretly married. But in 1963 Queen Victoria came through direct voice medium Leslie Flint and explained in her own voice, that John Brown had been her medium, and had enabled her to maintain contact with her beloved Albert. She kept detailed diaries of all their seances and the messages that came from Albert, but after she died everything was destroyed to protect her position as head of the Church of England. A Lawyer Presents the Evidence for the Afterlife

Author Victor Zammit

Click book title for link.

By Victor and Wendy Zammit

There could be many reasons why you are interested this book. Perhaps you are just curious about the afterlife. Or perhaps you have experienced the death of a loved one. It may be that you have had an out-of-body experience, or a near death experience, or some other mystical experience. Or, you may be realizing that we all inevitably have to make the journey to the afterlife one day.

If you have been trained to respect scientific method you will not just accept tradition or wishful thinking. You want something that can be supported by evidence. You want highly reliable information as to whether or not we continue to live in the afterlife.

And you want to know whether it is possible to get a message from your loved ones.

You want to know that the things people report about the afterlife are real and can be validated. You want hard, repeatable evidence that no one can rebut. You want witnesses, scientists, professionals and others with the highest credibility. You want to feel that the information you are receiving about the afterlife is the truth, the whole truth. And you may want something that you can share with friends and family members to show that there are good scientific reasons for accepting that there is more to life than the materialists claim.

This book presents highly convincing evidence amounting to proof for the existence of the afterlife. It shows that after investigating the evidence some of the most brilliant men and women—scientists and others—came to the conclusion that we all survive death.

The mediums and psychics studied by scientists were of course exceptional. They were the best of the best. People should be aware that not all psychics and mediums are developed to this degree and people take care in choosing a medium.

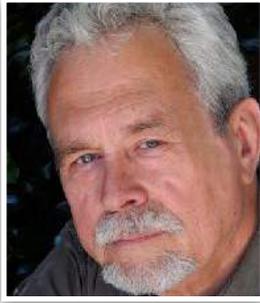

Over the last 10 years an earlier version of this book has been accessed on our website free-of-charge by more than a million people from all over the world. Volunteers who loved the earlier book translated it into Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Dutch, German, French and Russian. Every day we receive emails from people who say that the material in this book has changed their lives.

After so many years we have decided that it is time to take the Evidence for the Afterlife to a wider audience. This new and expanded version includes important new research and the latest discoveries. But once again it concentrates on evidence that is credible, repeatable and admissible in a court of law.

The book gives an introduction to more than 20 different areas of evidence for the afterlife, giving you the key facts and references. The chapters can be read in any order. We have tried to make it accessible to as many people as possible by writing in plain English, using short sentences and familiar vocabulary. We realize that many people reading it will not have English as their first language. There you can also sign up for our free weekly Friday Afterlife Report. We are now in the 13th year of sending out these highly researched and informative weekly reports.

Glimpses of Eternity: Sharing a Loved One's Passage From This Lifetime to the Next

By Dr. Raymond Moody

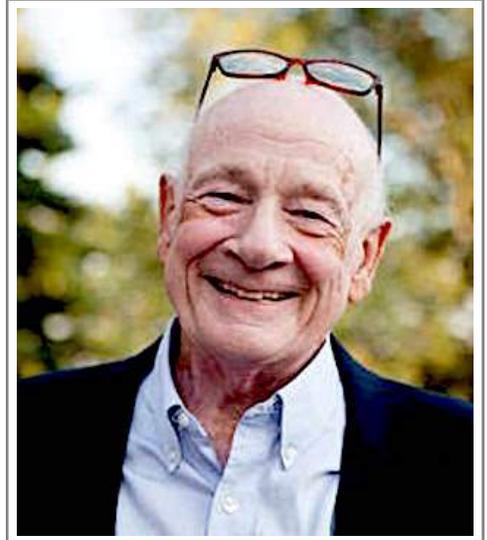

Raymond Moody is an American philosopher, psychiatrist, physician and author, most widely known for his books about the afterlife and near-death experiences, a term that he coined in 1975 in his multimillion bestseller, Life After Life.

His book, Glimpses of Eternity, published in 2010 revealed surprising new results from his lifelong investigation of what happens when we die. His first book, Life After Life, tells stories of people who died and then returned to life. These are typically known as NDEs or Near Death Experiences. Since publication in 1975, hundreds of thousands of people contacted Dr. Moody to share their own experiences. After a while, Dr. Moody discovered a startling new pattern emerging in that at the time of death, some loved ones had inexplicable experiences, a phenomenon which came to be known as the Shared Death Experience, or SDE.

Glimpses of Eternity is the first book to discuss the Shared Death Experience. In this book you will discover deathbed moments when entire families see the light, or the room changes shape. Some even tell of seeing a film-like review of a loved one's life, and learning things that they could never have known otherwise. The stories are at once a comfort and a mystery, giving us a new understanding of the journey that we will take at the end of our lives.

When Dr. Moody wrote Life After Life, which was the first systematic analysis of the Near Death Experience, the book drew much controversy. Although there was a large share of 'true believers' who felt that NDEs were evidence of an afterlife, skeptics dismissed them as hallucinations caused by a dying brain. Unlike the NDEs described in Life After Life, shared NDEs cannot be dismissed as hallucinations caused by a dying brain because the participants are obviously living and healthy, so those arguments simply do not hold up!

Dr. Moody admits that there are many unanswered questions about NDEs, both shared and non-shared. Why don't they happen all the time? What exactly do they tell us about the afterlife? What kind of people are more likely to have them?

Moody says that good science raises more questions than it answers, but he suspects we will make steady progress toward answering these questions as more research is done. Dr. Moody is not the only researcher documenting NDEs; he cites others who have reached similar conclusions, including his co-author Paul Perry and the researcher of deathbed experiences, Peter Fenwick.

Find the book on Amazon – Here

This book is filled with compelling stories of people who have shared the experience of death while not dying themselves. There are descriptions of people leaving their bodies and following the dead up tunnels into heavenly realms. There are stories of deathbed visions and indications that when dying people speak to invisible people in the room they are actually communicating with deceased relatives and friends.

Dr. Moody explains why the experiences are not hallucinations or the result of a lack of oxygen. The people who have shared death experiences all seem to be quite alive and well. What they see is a radiant light, heavenly places, and beings of light. This can sometimes also promote a transformation in the human psyche, as some participants are no longer afraid of death once they've had the experience.

As proven in Dr. Moody's research, at the time of a person's death, it seems that a window to another plane of existence is opened. This, in my opinion, is the same window that is opened to those who wait at the bedside of their dying loved one. It is only our earthbound, 'materially focused mind' that is caught, or stuck in the dense world. Who we really are senses the truth of spirit and Dr. Moody's findings will bring comfort to those who know how to operate in the finer realities of life.

This is an inspiring read. SDEs present the most compelling evidence of all, that when we die, the good stuff begins! This book is comforting to those with hunches that there's much more life after this life ends. It's also exciting in that such seemingly supernatural events occur between humans at the point of one of their deaths. It will be disappointing if this doesn't cause at least a few die-hard materialists to reconsider ... just this once.

Sacred Ghosts of Our Past

Our past informs the present. If we want to deeply understand ourselves and others, we need to explore the journeys of those who came before us: parents, ancestors and their culture, world events, and more. Our obvious past may be our own childhood memories, old photos and family stories. But the memories that have been forgotten, the stories that have not been told of times before photographs also contribute strongly to who and how we are now. In a way, these influences are sacred ghosts of the past that silently haunt us, spurring us on to greater things, or limiting our sense of self and our capacities to create fresh new possibilities in our lives and relations.

My mother died in 2021. She was the family historian. She remembered and loved to tell stories about her childhood and life in our small New Hampshire town during the depression, WWII and the post-war boom. She told stories how her grandfather came to Boston from Ireland on a ship during the Great Famine of the mid-1800s. He met his wife there and started their family, but life took a turn when they both unexpectedly died leaving two young boys. One was taken in by a wealthy family member outside Boston and went on to become a professor at Boston Latin

School. The other brother, my mother's father, was taken in by a family member in rural New Hampshire and was made to sleep in the barn. Every so often my mother would reveal a 'new' piece of the family story... or, was I just listening better? Many of these people were like ghosts to me, not quite real. But my mother had photos of those people and times tucked away, that I found after she died.

Suddenly the photos of my ancestors dressed in clothing of their eras, matched faces to the family stories. Some were formal photos, posed and taken in a studio. Others were causal photos taken at the beach, in nature and in neighborhoods. The photos revealed more information, innocence and emotion. I could almost feel their personalities come alive. Stories I'd heard over many decades started to land in my awareness as part of the foundation of my very existence. I wish my mother were here so that I could ask her the questions that I didn't think to ask her earlier before she died.

With the visual history of my family origins laid out before me, I saw the progression of my parents as teenagers with their parents. The personal stories I had heard were now profoundly matched up with photos of family relationships before I was born. I saw my parents' faces when they were dating in the 40s. I read letters they'd written when my father was in the Army Air Force in the Pacific. It was heart-opening. I saw their personal world come to life amidst the intense world they choose to love each other in. I was exposed to a whole new depth of perspective, understanding and appreciation for what I had not realized before.

It is truly humbling to realize that we are not alone. We are each part of a massive, complex network — a multi-dimensional matrix of family relationships. They all had outrageous varieties of life experiences, dreams, emotions, traumas, beliefs, choices, strengths, creative genius and world events before we were born, that are still influencing us now.

Our ancestral matrix is constantly informing us where we can be more free to draw on love, compassion, courage and creative possibilities to truly welcome and free the haunting ghosts of past traumas and longings so that we can shift into a whole new world of rising consciousness and new possibilities.

We, who are alive now, have the power and capacities to honor, resolve and dissolve these ancestral issues. We must first become aware that we are living out their beliefs, expectations, assumptions, unmet desires and dreams. Our power lies in bringing healing to these unconscious patterns, these sacred ghosts of our past, and consciously choosing to create new possibilities in our lives and in the future.

Citrine Lights Our Inner Fire and Helps Us Courageously Move Forward

As September was coming to an end, I stepped into a fire ceremony to welcome the fall season and honor the new moon. Working with the element of fire is always interesting. I find that it brings big changes, potent messages, and supports the release of limiting stories and beliefs.

With this particular ceremony I was contemplating whether or not to see a project through.

As I stood by the fire, I looked around my ceremonial space. My eyes were drawn to the paper prayer flags I hung in a tree at the beginning of the summer season. Each one held a specific intention. I walked over to them, removed them from the tree, and one by one I placed them in the fire. When I got to the flag that held my intention for this specific project I hesitated.

I felt what I had been trying not to feel: worry and doubt. I wondered if my timing was off and perhaps I should just let go of the project.

Fall is a season of harvest. It is the time when I intended for this project to come together yet here I was, considering abandoning it.

Have you ever done this? . . . Set an intention, planted the seeds, laid a foundation, and walked away just before it is ready to harvest because you lost faith in your dream?

I sank deeper into my fire ceremony and my thoughts being drawn to Citrine, the October crystal of the month. Curious, I asked the citrine crystal what it wanted to share.

Its message was crystal clear: Don't walk away before the harvest. Stoke your inner fire. Bring this intention to life.

A perfect message. I leaned in even deeper. I stoked my fire. And reignited my passion for this project. It is most definitely time to bring this one to life.

Over the past couple of years, the sense of clear and inspired passion has waned for many of us. Along the way, new stories and beliefs of limitation have been written. What I felt at the fire on this day is that it is time to shake off those limitations and open the door to new possibilities for ourselves and for the world.

Citrine is showing up this October to help us light our inner fire and courageously move forward.

Life is calling us to find meaning in new ways. We do this by creating space to listen within. Spend time with these reflection questions:

What lights you up?

What makes you come alive?

As you move through the month of October, get a hold of a piece of citrine. Wear it. Carry it. Place it on an altar. Pay attention to how it attunes you to what lights you up and makes you feel alive.

Often we worry that in asking these questions, our focus will be on superficial, selfish sorts of things. But the reality is, as we sink into these questions on a daily basis, deeper and deeper truths emerge. We find answers that we cannot glean at first glance. Simple questions create space for our heart to answer with love and truth. And if you feel stuck, pull out a piece of citrine and invite it to bring in the light, stoke your inner fire, and help you to see what you're not yet seeing.

A World in Turmoil

Scribed by Kathleen Jacoby in 2011. Kathleen is the former Editor of The Inner Voice who made her transition into spirit in April 2019. She has communicated to me that she is “sitting at the feet of the Masters” learning more about the Greater Universe.

The world at the moment is in disarray. Looking at almost every country on the planet we see either political unrest or near economic collapse. We are heading into something that has not faced the past few generations, and we are going to be confronted by challenges that we have not been prepared to face. Yet, like the generations of the past who dealt with depression and wars, we will adapt. The difficulties ahead may force us to deal with aspects of ourselves as a people and as individuals that we haven't looked at.

Technological advancement has removed many of the mundane things that used to be chores. We've become soft in the middle, and the coming years may indeed require that we buck up and tighten our belts and adjust our expectations about what we think life owes us. It's time for us to take to heart something that was said years ago by John F. Kennedy. “Ask not what your country can do for you, but ask what you can do for your country.” We haven't done that in a long time and now we may need to turn to that admonition out of universal necessity. Beyond that, our statement might be enlarged to, “Ask not what your fellow citizen can do for you, ask what you can do for them.”

In looking at the whole idea of healing the world which now permeates my thinking, we have to look first at the roots of the “dis-ease” that requires healing. In all of it, we can go back to root language and stories within our Bible and in other religious texts about the fall of humans from the state of grace. If we go beyond the allegory presented and turn the context of what was stated into practical terms, the overriding and glaringly obvious cause is a sense of separateness that created duality.

In the Adam and Eve scenario, what was provided in innocence was defiled once the intellect arose. In the process of allowing the Intellect to override spiritual resources, the mind became a mine field in which each of us has a war between “heaven and earth” going on daily. There is the illusion of our own wants and needs as juxtaposed to the wants and needs of others. As we each feel our view and perception as the only clear and right choice, we preclude the views of others and war over space, control, and dominance. Adversarial positions keep us locked in a perpetual war between what we see as good and evil. We have fallen into the trap of duality.

We imbue qualities on to a living earth that justify our exploitation of it and depletion of what is given to us freely. We take for granted the gifts of nature and seek to manipulate it for a profit motive that has no connection to life systems and maintaining balance within that system. We see cultural warfare in the name of a god that could never be as petty as the ones espousing its legitimacy and demeaning any other view of the Creator.

All of this is done out of an internal primal need to be safe, to control variables so that nothing will be out of order. Yet, in the very insistence for one secular view, an adversarial position is established, and there can only be winners and losers. There is no room for acceptance of differing points of view, ways of being, or beliefs that see creation from various angles. If I need to dominate everything around me in order to protect my view and show my level of power, I am deluded. And this is one of the major cancers on the earth right now.

Life is out of balance and out of order as humans continue to propagate ignorance in the name of “the only real truth.” Humans have become cancers on the planet — rogue cells that are disconnected from the flow of the whole, devouring everything on our path and skewing the planet's natural checks and balances through our avarice and self-importance.

We are a species clearly in need of healing, so healing the world starts with healing human beings. And healing human beings starts with healing each one of us ... cells in the Being of God. We need to address our own sense of separation and bring ourselves back into the unified whole, the blessing that we were given in original intent rather than the annihilation we have caused.

Looking for the Rainbow

By Tom Brown

In facing life's most difficult challenges, I have found that there is always a gift waiting once the ache and fear and grief have settled. As the cries are absorbed into silence, as the sun always rises just when the night seems like it will never end, there is something indestructible at the center of each of us, though it can be quite painful being transformed and rearranged.

My own struggle to open my heart has been a long one. Silence and solitude now are like a lamp to illuminate corners I've never seen. Stripped of material goods and plans, I have discovered that we cannot eliminate hunger, but we can feed each other. We cannot eliminate loneliness, but we can hold each other. We cannot eliminate pain, but we can live a life of compassion.

In the middle of the deepest, darkest night when we feel most humbled by life, the first shadow of our wings begins to appear. The depth of the darkness reveals the magic of who we are. The love that we are is waiting to be unleashed.

The most important thing to remember during times of great change is to fix our eyes anew on things that can't change. The life that we want will emerge from a stillness that takes root in our soul. We find it when we settle deeply into the hidden, loving dimensions of every moment, allowing life to be what it wants to be and allowing ourselves to be who we were created to be.

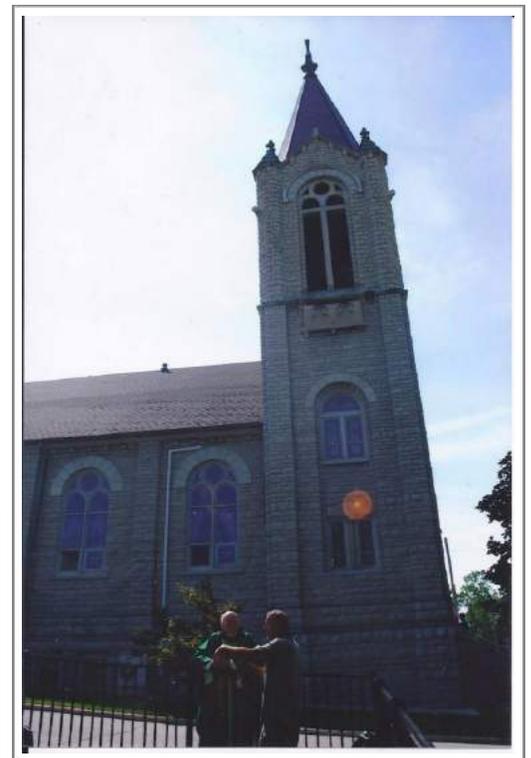

Sometimes the fire we go through becomes our purifying agent. Sometimes difficult experiences have the effect of a storm. Afterwards, we see a beauty in the sky and a clearness in the air that were not there before. What was chaotic at the time, ultimately had a healing effect. And sometimes, when we're really fortunate, we look up in the sky and see a rainbow. It could not have happened without the rain. Δ

Ghosts and poltergeists are real.

They are entities who have their consciousness focused to such a degree that they can cause manifestations on the physical level. These manifestations can occur because of powerful emotions such as intense sadness, jealousy or rage. Souls can end up "earthbound" because they have simply not chosen to move on yet. Sometimes they are confused souls who refuse to accept that they are dead. Other times they refuse to transition into 'the light' because they are happy where they are. But no matter the reason the soul stays behind for a time, eventually all ghosts decide to move on to 'the resting place' between lives where all souls go upon death. This is why haunted places eventually lose their hauntings, and you don't often hear about ghosts from ancient times.

Treasures from the Spirit World

An excerpt from the book By Karen Heasley and Susan Linville

A Religion of Introspection

Established religions each contain truths and half-truths. They depend upon holy books written centuries ago. Although they offer guidelines for life, each is limited because God is interpreted as being outside of oneself. They separate the person from a spiritual oneness with the infinite intelligence.

For one seeking to live in harmony with life on the earthly plane, religions often erect roadblocks of laws, rites and judgements which impede progress. Spiritualism teaches that each individual must find his or her own way in this life. We are all personally responsible for establishing harmony by obeying infinite laws, not man-made ones. A follower of Spiritualism finds God by constantly looking within, not without.

When we rid ourselves of religious prejudice and dogma, we begin to grow. There may be many obstacles, but if we carefully seek the truth, we will begin to see that emotions like jealousy, hatred, envy, and greed are products of individual selfishness. They must be cast out before we can proceed on the path toward infinite intelligence. When we reach that ideal, we will see the infinite intelligence manifesting everywhere.

Only by looking inward with an open mind will we begin to discover the divine plan of infinite intelligence which governs all things. Only after our own struggle, will we be ready to take on the greater task of helping others on their way through life. As this desire begins to manifest, others who seek the truth will be attracted to you.

Hugh Gordon Burroughs was the Vice President of the National Spiritualist Association of Churches and founder of the Church of Two Worlds. Before he passed in 1971, he wrote, “By being of service here on the earth plane, he renders service to infinite intelligence; and in so doing, he achieves greater happiness here as well as hereafter.” Along with helping others discover their own connection with the infinite intelligence, Spiritualism requires that we be receptive to the vibrations that reach us from the greater universe. Through conscious living and openness, you are in the position to receive communications from the Spirit World.

H. Gordon Burroughs was the Vice President of the National Spiritualist Association of Churches and founder of the Church of Two Worlds.

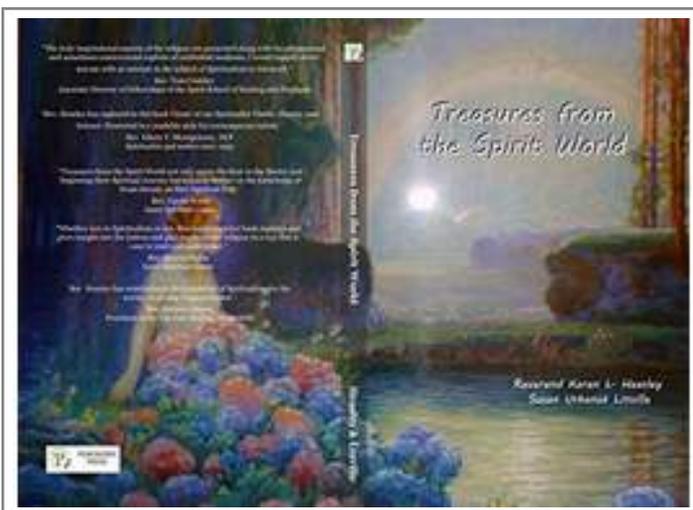

“Within every human being is the power of receiving from the great reservoir of infinite intelligence from which can be supplied all human needs. Here, all true knowledge is waiting to be drawn upon by every child of this great universe,” wrote Burroughs.

Burroughs said the student desiring development should meditate a few minutes each day and repeat the following:

“I know that more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of; therefore, my voice will rise like a fountain in prayer for myself, for those whom I call friends, and for all mankind. Oh infinite intelligence, ruler of the universe, make me more receptive to thy blessings and to Thee. May I be more conscious of the great knowledge around and about me; and may I, as I grow more able to know Thee, receive bountifully from Thee, that I may impart real knowledge to my fellow man.”

By developing your spiritual receptivity, you will reach a greater capacity for joy and a greater capacity to help others. You will begin to arrive.

Spirits of Place Hold Energy, Power and Feeling

Spirits of Place, or even of an object, can be felt by our Heart intuition and Gut instinct. Last week, upon entering John Bosshard's long, narrow building filled with antiques, we felt a calm presence there. Buddhas, sculptures, and architectural items each told a story of times past. We were told it wasn't like that at first.

First, the Spirits of Place thrived in John's heartfelt gallery in Santa Fe. We bought some wonderful imports from Bosshard's over the years ... carved wooden cart railings and later a "Spirit House" from his quality collections. Then, he relocated to Taos. The gallery there was intimate; and, the Asian and Native art was beautiful. Next, one final move took him to Abiquiu, New Mexico, where Georgia O'Keefe had her "Ghost House." A bit off the beaten track, they wondered if the people would come.

In addition, this building was a past trading post. So, it had a varied history since the 1700s of many energies flowing through it. At first, some art collectors found the place, but rarely bought. It simply wasn't working. Then, a woman came in and said how sad [the place] felt. All the cast-off statues that were once honored, treasured and loved, now held a deep and heavy feeling on this site. They had lost their light!

With permission, she smudged the space, the artifacts, and furnishings with sage and sweetgrass. (Smudging is a traditional Native American method of using smoke from burning herbs to purify a space). Simultaneously, she invoked the Spirit of Gaia (Earth) to fill the room with light, blessings and love. An immediate shift occurred. People started coming after seeing Ghost Ranch, and they were buying the art! The Spirits had returned and the sacred statues were once again loved and honored. Plus, each passing year has brought more prosperity and treasured discoveries to everyone.

What do your Spirits of Place feel like? Are they filled with beauty, kindness, and love?

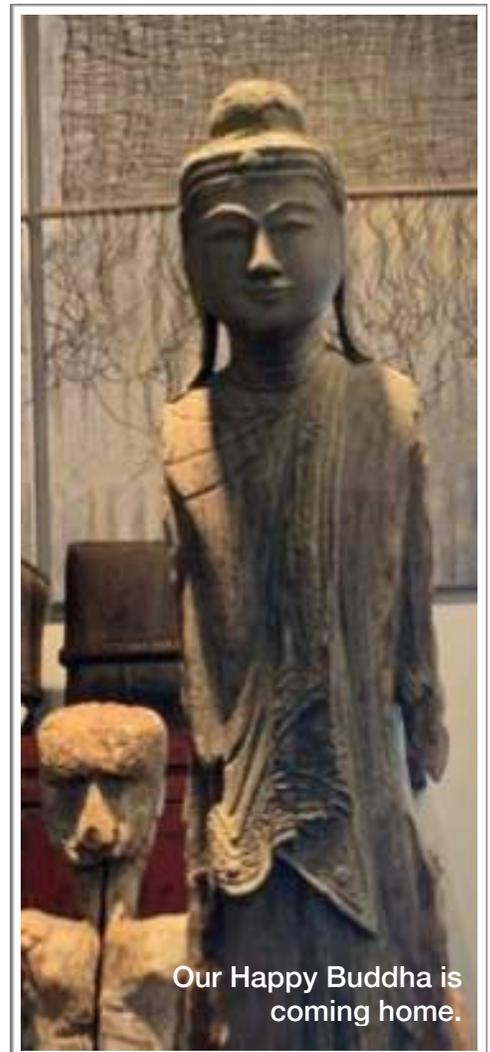

Sage and sweetgrass can clear a room of old patterns of energy that no longer serve you. Then, it's time to refresh the space and ignite your passion.

Preparing to Be Born

Republished from TIV October 2017 issue

Sometimes a piece comes to me from a friend that I so enjoyed that I want to pass it along. This anonymous verse is about preparing to be born — but as you will see — it is also about leaving. I find, as perhaps you do, that each birthday brings a new sense of ourselves and a desire to imagine the future and what will come next. While we don't look forward to leaving this life, still we realize it is inevitable. Here is a lovely way to imagine what comes next.

In a mother's womb were two babies. One asked the other: "Do you believe in life after delivery?"

The other replies, "Why, of course. There has to be something after delivery. Maybe we are here to prepare ourselves for what we will be later."

"Nonsense," says the other. "There is no life after delivery. What would that life be?"

"I don't know, but there will be more light than here. Maybe we will walk with our legs and eat from our mouths."

The other says, "This is absurd! Walking is impossible. And eat with our mouths? Ridiculous! The umbilical cord supplies nutrition. Life after delivery is to be excluded. The umbilical cord is too short."

"I think there is something and maybe it's different than it is here."

The other replies, "No one has ever come back from there. Delivery is the end of life, and in the after-delivery it is nothing but darkness and anxiety and it takes us nowhere."

"Well, I don't know," says the other, "but certainly we will see mother and she will take care of us."

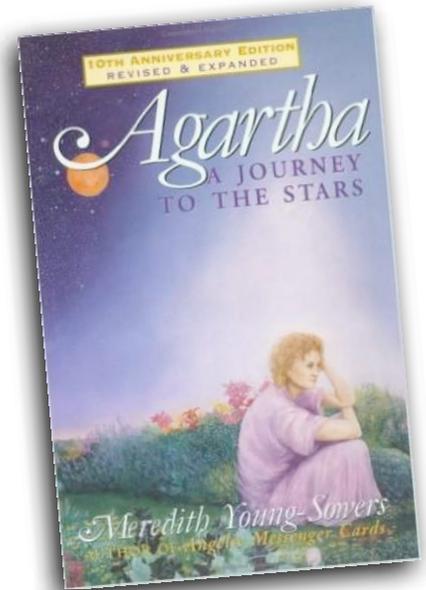

"Mother? You believe in mother? Where is she now?"

"She is all around us. It is in her that we live. Without her there would not be this world."

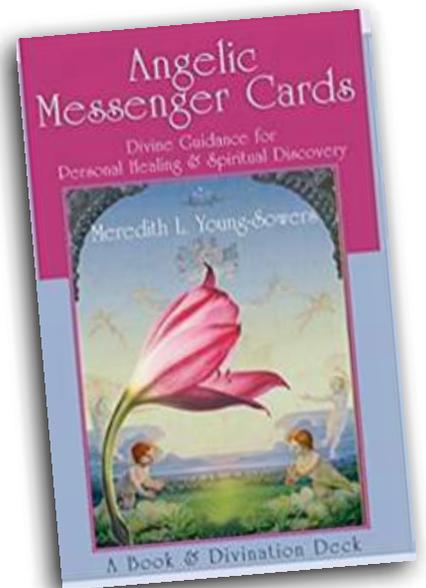

"I don't see her, so it's only logical that she doesn't exist."

To which the other replied, "Sometimes when you're very quiet you can hear her, you can sense her. I believe there is a reality after delivery and we are here to prepare ourselves for that reality."

So my friends, wherever you are in your life journey, recognize that you and your loved ones are indeed safe in this magnificent Universe that is made up of the energy of Love. Δ

"Twins In The Womb" Painting by Debby Kalush
<https://fineartamerica.com/featured/twins-in-the-womb-deby-kalush.html>

Over the course of this year, we are exploring each of the planets as the active, sub-parts of our personalities, each one corresponding with a chakra in our body system. The illustration below shows the chakra related to this month's planet.

Venus rules two signs; Taurus and Libra. In Taurus, our earthy Venus focused our attention on our physical needs and our values, attracting security, comfort, abundance, beauty and pleasure.

Now, in Libra, Venus applies the laws of attraction to a more complicated airy endeavor. It's time to apply the lessons of self-awareness toward creating, maintaining and improving relationships, especially significant ones. Our Libran Venus is our yearning to connect to others through love and mutual creativity. Who doesn't desire a companion, a lover, good friend or pet? To create and sustain such relationships, we must learn how to relax our own ego needs and tune into other people's wants, needs and goals.

Falling in love is the joy we feel when it seems that we can finally let down our Martian armor of self-protection and embrace another soul as if they are a part of our greater self. It feels safe. It feels affirming, comforting, and pleasurable; a bit like coming home.

Yet, unlike the feeling of acquiring and possessing a physical object we value, maintaining a positive relationship to a valued human soul requires much more from of us. We begin the process of applying our own emotional learning to others' emotional needs. To continue to sustain and grow a fulfilling bond with a loved one, requires an ongoing awareness and valued attention to both our own needs and to the needs of our beloved other. Their feelings and needs must become as important as our own. This is the "commitment" that most people long for in relationship.

And once committed, we are awakened to a whole new level of relationship learning. To manifest the harmony, balance, fairness and beauty that Libra represents, we must come to understand the many lessons around our role in supporting our beloved. A primary principle in this is the polarity between self (Aries) and other (Libra). Finding the balance is key. Are we responsible for our partner's emotions? No. Are we responsible for our own? Yes. Can we fix our partner's hurts? No. Can we be supportive and nurturing? Yes. What does being supportive mean? When is it appropriate to defend our own interests?

This is the stuff that builds a partnership and, over time, leads us into deep and real intimacy with another soul as reflected by Pluto in the next sign of Scorpio.

Some healthy attributes of our Libran Venus include fairness, diplomacy, cooperation, consideration, harmony.

Unhealthy attributes include indecisiveness, over pleasing, lack of assertiveness, lack of self-identity. In your body, the energy of Venus sits in your 4th chakra, the Heart chakra. Close your eyes and put your hands over your chest. Take a deep breath in and out. Notice the part of you that feels connection to others and their concerns. Can you arouse appreciation and gratitude for such relationships to people and pets in your past and present? Can you appreciate the many ways you have been learning to improve such relationships? Do you experience balance between self and other?

To lend strength to your Libran Venus, try repeating the following affirmation: As the embodiment of divine love and beauty, I am innately worthy of giving and receiving love in relationships with others. As others teach me how to love them, I also teach them how to love me.

Another World

From The StillPoint Within

By JA Dioguardi

Dissolving into time and space, expanding into the vast unknown,
I needn't breathe the air to live;
another world, to me, is shown....

For when my ego self lets go,
my wiser self can come to know the hidden realm that few embrace, not willing to succumb to grace.

And so, when I give into the urge to allow my lower self to merge into the One, into the void, then a mystical field is deployed.

Let go, be still, relax, give in;
allow yourself to go within....

Dissolve the bounds of human flesh and let your inner self enmesh with higher truths and wiser souls by shaking off your mortal goals.
Fulfill desires that love inspires;
escape the pain of the earthly plane.
Exist in peace and faith, and trust that what appears to be real is just an illusion created by...you.

Humanity is but a way for limitlessness to joyfully play with forms and feelings, thoughts and time~
a concrete place to reveal the sublime.

An open heart, a loving mind will manifest in what mortals find to be an earthly paradise.
Be free of the vise of ego's fear,
for all you desire is HERE!

If Walls Could Talk... and in Feng Shui they do!

By Laura Carrillo

Editor's Note: In Feng Shui we understand that everything is energy and that everything is interconnected. So-called "inanimate" objects are alive with chi by the thoughts and memories we have about the item such as where we purchased it, or by who gave it to us. And they all have a story to tell. In this article, written by Western School of Feng Shui® alumna Laura Carrillo, she gives some examples. The goal is you want to "live with what you love." If you can do that, you will have done perfect Feng Shui for yourself.

If walls could talk they would tell you a story. What is the story? Look around, it's all there. The writing is on the wall, so to speak. People assume art is merely a picture, or a painting, or a photograph. What a physical space (and the objects in it) is communicating is obvious to me, though it may not be to most people. Feng Shui is a physical language which helps interpret those signs.

Even if you don't know anything about Feng Shui, you can look at an image and interpret it on a gut level. You can see what it is communicating and ascertain whether it is positive or negative. Think of art in terms of the narrative or story, then decide if that is what you want your story to be. Some people like dark imagery because they think it's cool, or profound. Since my goal as a feng shui consultant is to help people create a positive setting and narrative, I wouldn't necessarily recommend such art.

Art provides your space visual cues that create a narrative. The walls are telling your story. What do you want that story to be? There are specific areas of a space that pertain to specific areas of life, such as your career or love life. It helps to know the area in which you are placing a piece of art, because context is important.

The bagua is the most important tool in Feng Shui for curating and interpreting the narrative. It is an energetic map that represents nine life sectors calledguas. These include: Prosperity, Fame, Love, Family, Health, Children and Creativity, Skills and Knowledge, Career and Travel, and Helpful People. So for example, if you place romantic art in your Skills and Knowledge area, you may not be making the best use of the art. It could be better placed in your Love area.

When I wanted greater success in my career, I thought about what kind of imagery would help. Water is the element associated with the Career area and in feng shui it also represents abundance. With this in mind, I placed a painting of a waterfall above my desk in my career gua. Suddenly, I had more Feng Shui gigs than ever, and my cash flow increased significantly. This is an example of the way art supported my intentions and served me in a positive way.

Think about art as a way of foreshadowing your story. You can play a conscious role in how your story plays out. It's very empowering! It not only works from an energetic perspective, but from a psychological one. Visual cues feed your subconscious mind. Your mind processes the information and works diligently to manifest the story being told.

I once worked for a business that sold art. Some of the art was positive and beautiful, while some was dark and depressing. A series of pieces depicted the tragedy of the Twin Towers. I lived in New York during 9/11 and know firsthand the impact it had on New Yorkers. It was one of the most depressing chapters of my life. I couldn't understand why these pieces were so prominently featured. One of them was placed in the career gua of the business. I told the owner what it represented symbolically and how it wasn't good for business, but my words fell on deaf ears. That series of paintings was not only "bad feng shui" for the business, it served as a powerful alchemy that depicted a less than positive outcome.

The business had a number of other issues. Most notably, the bathrooms were located in the Prosperity area representing money going down the drain. There are cures for this. I tried to offset the energetic loss by hanging crystals above the toilets, but the owner removed them. Crystals alone cannot compensate for every ill, but they can help remedy an energetic loss. They were a tiny edit in a space that needed a big rewrite. When I discovered the crystals had been removed, I decided to leave. Very shortly after this, the business quickly and dramatically imploded.

From that experience I was able to see first-hand how powerfully the imagery and narrative of a space can become its own self-fulfilling prophecy.

Art possesses what I like to call magical properties that can be used for good or ill, depending on the associations you have with the piece. When you choose art, you are drawn to certain pieces. Take stock of how a piece makes you feel and whether it is a feeling you want to bask in every day. You may be drawn to darker pieces because there is something relatable in them. We can all relate to pain and suffering, but that doesn't mean we need to live immersed in it.

Happiness is a choice. Choose to tell your story with visually inspiring and triumphant imagery. Δ

What Does it Mean to Move from the 3rd to the 5th Dimension?

By Lynn Schuster

I have been aware, for quite some time, that we are moving from the Third to the Fifth Dimension. I've felt that to be true, but for the most part, all I really knew about the Fifth Dimension was that we are moving into a higher frequency of spiritual evolution. We are here to bring in more Light and more Love.

So what does that mean? How do we get there? Why are we not talking about the Fourth Dimension? We live in the Third Dimension. Wouldn't we need to pass through the Fourth Dimension to get to the Fifth?

I am looking to become more spiritually evolved, more loving, less judgmental; more compassionate, less resentful; more accepting of others, and less fearful. I began to dive into these feelings and ideas, and here is what I have found out so far.

The Fourth Dimension begins to open the heart. It is an etheric dimension that provides a pathway to the higher worlds. It is a dimension that demands that we learn to forgive before we can move to higher frequencies. The vibration of the Fourth Dimension provides us with lessons and experiences that require us to be mindful of our choices and perhaps choose life styles and behaviors that may be different from those of the past. It is true that we are all connected energetically, but perhaps even more importantly, we need to know that we are all sovereign beings.

We each have our own paths to follow. True, we are all headed in the same direction, some of us further along than others, but our experiences in the Third Dimension lead us closer and closer to the Higher Dimensions of pure, unconditional Love and Light.

Before we came into this world, we created soul contracts with each other. We can walk together, but I still have my experiences and you have yours. We each come with our own perspectives. Each of us are responsible and should take credit for the choices and decisions that we make. Everything we do, every choice we make, effects the collective consciousness. If we truly understood the power of our words, thoughts, and feelings, we would be more mindful of how we speak, think and feel. Our words, thoughts and feelings are a vibrational match to all we experience.

Only I can feel the love that flows through my heart. I can talk about my experiences and try to explain the feelings and emotions that flow through my body, but I can't give my feelings to you for you to experience. You have your own. We can agree that love feels peaceful and kind, that anger, resentment and jealousy bring about fear, but I can't experience the level of love or the depths of the fear that you feel. I can have empathy for your pain, and I can share my love with you, but still, we each have our own experiences. We are sovereign.

No one has ever prepared us for the experience of moving into the Fifth Dimension and higher. I receive glimpses of it when I meditate and communicate telepathically with the animals, or go to places like the Akashic Records. I can feel my Spirit Guides with me. My heart opens fully when I am consciously connecting with the animals or clearing my own "stuff" in the Akashic Records. I let go of a sense of duality. Not good/evil, light/dark, male/female, but I see and feel us all as one, we are all connected energetically.

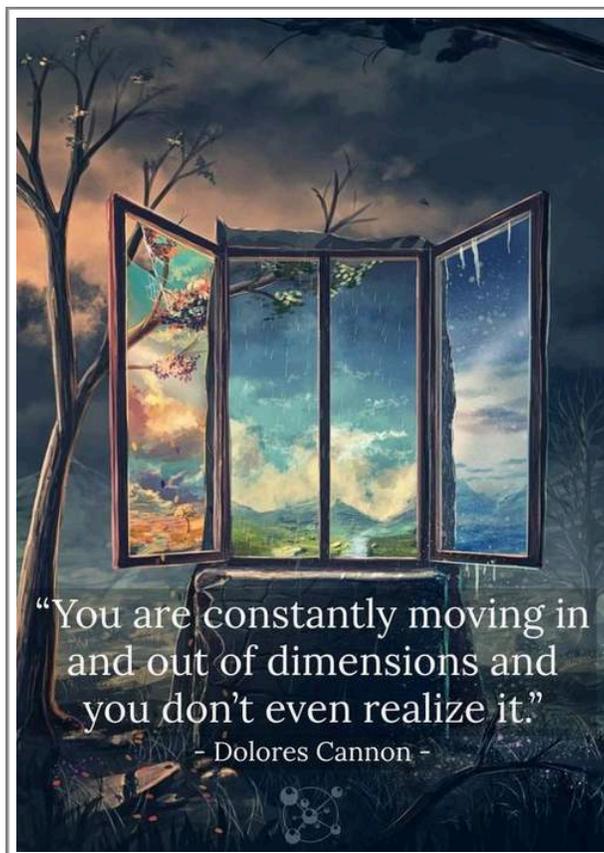

Several years ago, I experienced the resentment, judgement and anger of three of my peers. I wasn't sure what I had done wrong, but their fear was directed at me and I felt that I had become their scape goat.

One day, while I was deep in meditation, I asked, how can I find forgiveness? An angel came to me and I heard a gentle male voice say, "Ask for it, Lynn." My response came immediately and from the depths of my soul. With reverence I said to the angel, "Please forgive me."

Immediately, I could feel the burden lifted from my shoulders. The gratitude and love I felt was so powerful that tears flowed from my eyes. My heart was wide open. I felt like I was floating. This is one of the most powerful experiences of my life. All I could say was "Thank you." And bask in the glory of the feeling.

Shortly after that experience, the three ladies that brought me to this place, found other work and one by one, they walked out of my life. Mission accomplished, contract fulfilled. I was able to replace my fear with love. And I was able to forgive.
